Welcome from the Principal

Located in the heart of London, King's College London is one of the United Kingdom's oldest and most prestigious universities. Ranked among the top 20 universities in the world,*

King's encompasses internationally recognised and acclaimed research, nine diverse faculties of expertise supported by pre-eminent academics in their disciplines, an enviable global alumni network and a portfolio of degrees, programmes and events that are globally recognised for their excellence.

It is with great pleasure that we welcome students this summer from around the world and offer them the opportunity to learn and thrive with us here in London.

Our Summer Programmes attract top students from around the world, and this rich mix of cultures, experience and knowledge, alongside a diverse choice of academically rigorous modules and a lively social programme, generates a unique environment for students to flourish both academically and socially.

We utilise London as a classroom, which offers unique and exceptional cultural, commercial, legal and scientific opportunities to our students.

I join the Summer Programmes team in hoping that you will choose to apply for one of our exciting modules this summer and making King's your summer destination of choice for 2015.

Research-led teaching

At the forefront of discovery King's is among the top seven UK universities for research earnings and has been rated excellent by the Quality Assurance Agency for students' educational experience.

A spirit of enquiry permeates everything we do.

Established reputation

England's 4th oldest university King's College London was founded by King George IV and the Duke of Wellington in 1829. When the University of London was established in 1836, King's became one of its two founding colleges.

Introduction

Since its foundation in 1829, King's College London has prided itself on being at the forefront of higher education, continuing to make a strong contribution to modern society through collaboration, academia and research.

With a distinguished history and notable alumni, King's has consistently strived for excellence; it has been this determination for student-focused, high quality education that has contributed to King's being named as one of the top 20 universities in the world.*

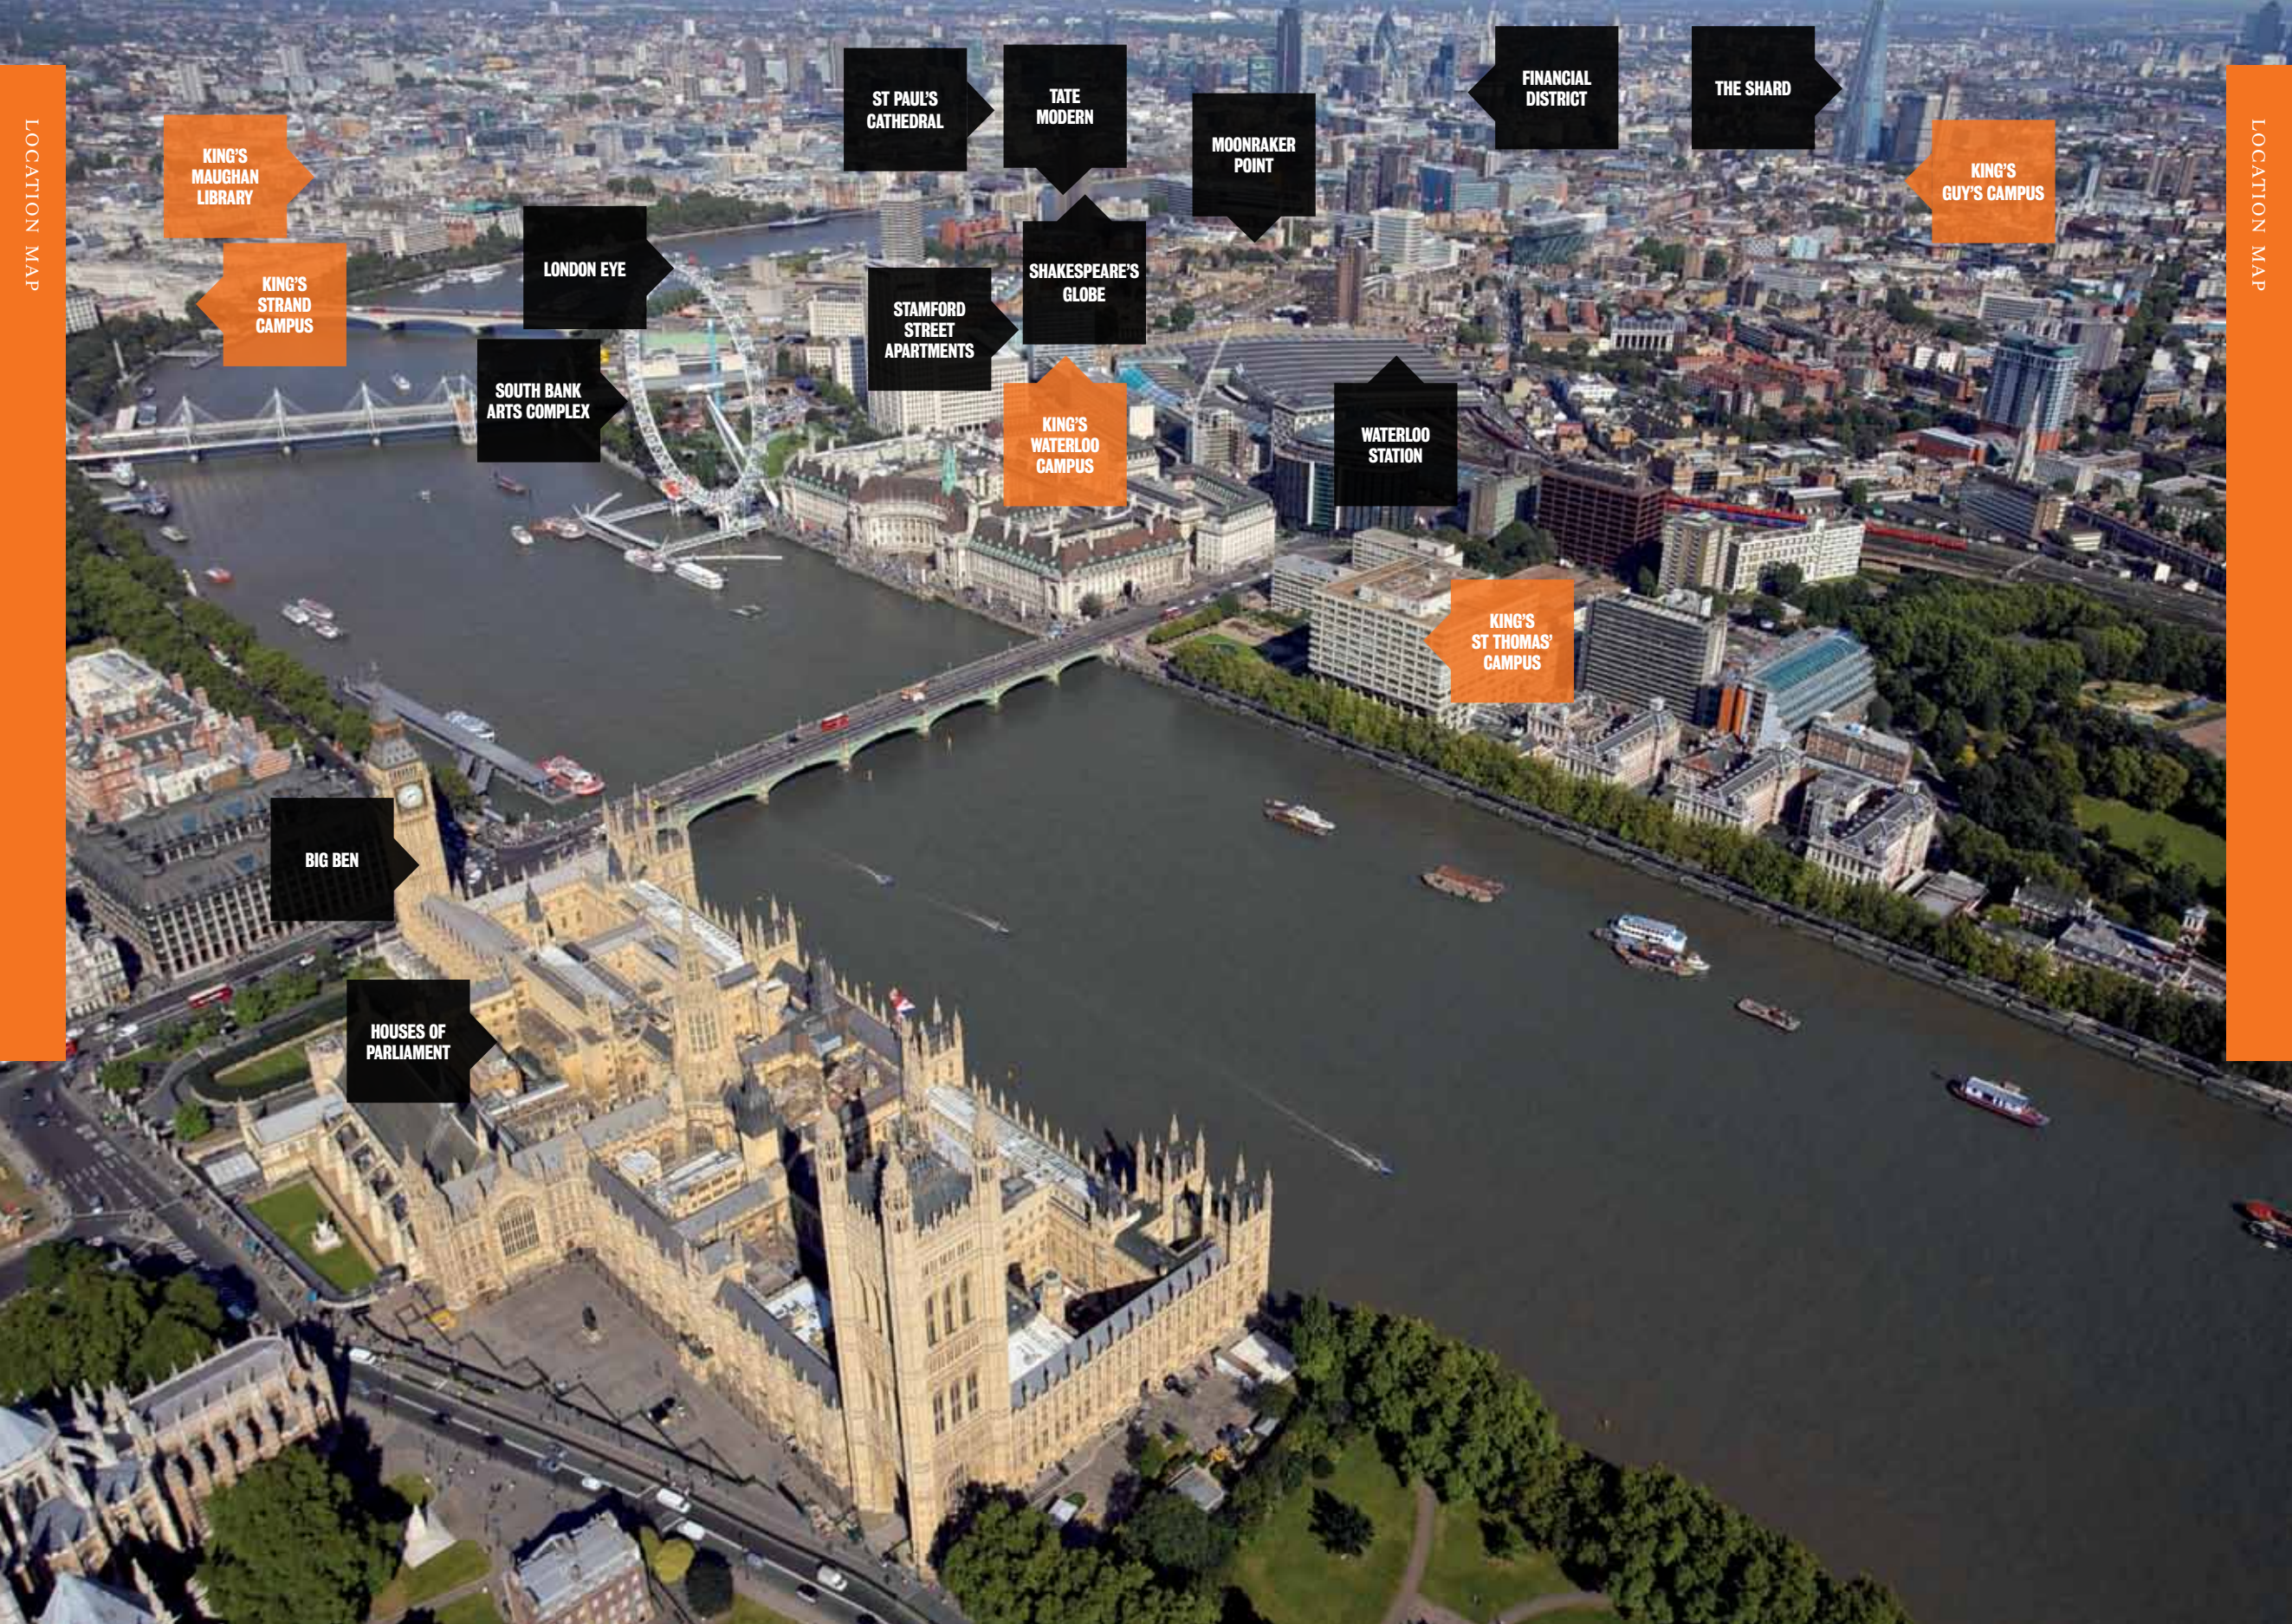

Our summer programmes have continued with this tradition and since 2009 the Undergraduate Summer School has built up a strong reputation with a unique selection of summer modules to challenge and inspire. From literature and politics to law and health, students from all over the world have flocked to King's to expand or enhance their current field of study.

The successful introduction of the Pre-University Summer School into the suite of summer programmes gives high school students the opportunity to experience higher education at a leading university.

We also offer Summer Sessions which give working professionals the opportunity to up-skill in a dynamic, multi-disciplinary environment through various modules designed specifically with today's manager in mind.

As one of the oldest universities in the United Kingdom and steeped in tradition, King's is ensuring it stays current and continues to offer quality education of relevance.

with London as your classroom.*

Voice of the Student

Our professors encouraged us to discuss and immerse ourselves in the various case studies to enhance our learning of the concepts. This allowed me to build my confidence in sharing my viewpoints and to understand others from a different cultural background as well. I would highly recommend anyone who wants a fulfilling summer activity to join the King's Summer School. Looking back, I can say that it has been my best summer experience so far.

Session One:
6 July – 24 July 2015

Session Two:
27 July – 14 August 2015

The Undergraduate Summer School will give you the freedom to broaden and deepen your knowledge and skills while providing you with the opportunity to study in one of the world's most exciting cities.

Study business with London's financial district as a back-drop; experience Shakespeare through new eyes with plays performed at Shakespeare's Globe; understand politics and law and see the Houses of Parliament up close. You can choose to gain insight into new disciplines or expand your knowledge in familiar subjects at one of the top 20 universities in the world.*

Who are our students?

The King's Undergraduate Summer School is proud to be one of the most internationally diverse summer programmes in the UK. In 2014 we saw students from 90 countries around the globe, ensuring an exciting mix of cultures and people. Our modules are set at first and second year undergraduate level however we frequently have PhD and Masters-level students, mature learners and working professionals attend the Undergraduate Summer School.

Why attend our Undergraduate Summer School?

Academic quality

Each module is fully assessed and marked, often through a mixture of coursework, presentations and group projects. Students who meet the attendance criteria will receive a record of their achievement.

London as your classroom

Many modules will take you off campus and into the rich cultural, political and economic environment of London as much as possible to help connect your academic study with the real world. You might attend performances or exhibitions, visit local businesses and international organisations, or perhaps enjoy a day trip to one of a huge number of exciting destinations outside London. All modules take place at our central Strand and Waterloo campuses which sit on either side of the River Thames and boast Covent Garden, the West End, Soho and London's South Bank as just some of the spectacular destinations located nearby.

Collaborative modules

King's Undergraduate Summer School works hard to offer a wide range of high interest modules as part of the summer programme. To ensure we maintain a unique module offering we work directly with external organisations to offer collaborative modules so students have a King's academic experience while also learning from those in industry. In 2015 we are working with the Museum of London, the Royal United Services Institute (RUSI) and the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR).

Interactive classes

Most of our modules have an interactive approach and may include seminars, discussion groups, scenarios and roleplay. We try to limit the size of classes so you can really get to know your fellow students and tutor. Many students come expecting large anonymous lectures and are often surprised that they leave having made lifelong friends and long-lasting memories of their time in class.

Lively social programme

A lively and varied optional social programme is offered to all Undergraduate Summer School students to complement your module. You could join a boat party down the Thames, enjoy world-class theatre, soak up the atmosphere with a historical walking tour around London or experience life further afield with days out around the UK.

Centrally located accommodation

Accommodation is optional but can be booked for the entire duration of your summer programme, plus additional nights if you wish to arrive early or stay longer. This is offered on a first-come, first-serve basis so you should book early to ensure accommodation is available. Rooms are offered at our Stamford Street and Moonraker Point apartments which are located a short journey from class. You will have your own bedroom, including en-suite facilities and share a communal kitchen. There are on-site laundry facilities, 24-hour security, and even a gym located at Stamford Street Apartments.

Admission

Students come from all over the world to study with us; as everyone is an individual we treat each application on its own merit.

Admission & Academic Information

Admission criteria

Students come from all over the world to study with us; as everyone is an individual we treat each application on its own merit. We look for committed students who not only meet our general admission criteria, but who also have a passion for learning.

In order to apply for the Undergraduate Summer School at King's you should meet the criteria below.

To be eligible to attend the Undergraduate Summer School at King's you should:

- Have successfully completed a year's university level study by the time you start your summer module;
- Have achieved excellent grades in your national university system, for example in the UK a 2:1 (upper second class) or above; in the US a GPA of 3.3 or above; please refer to our website for further information concerning equivalent qualifications;
- If English is not your first language or your degree level study is not taught in English you must have met our English language requirements.

Please see further details below.

If you do not meet the requirements but believe that you have equivalent qualifications and will benefit from attending the Undergraduate Summer School, please contact us; we are happy to offer advice.

English language requirements

All modules on the Undergraduate Summer School will be taught and assessed entirely in English, apart from elements of the language modules (where applicable). Therefore all students whose first language is not English or who have not been taught at university level in English must provide proof of English proficiency. Please refer to our website for further information concerning our minimum English language requirements.

Contact time and teaching

Each Undergraduate Summer School module runs for three weeks and you can choose to study over one or both sessions. Only one module can be undertaken per session. Classes run from Monday to Friday. Undergraduate Summer School modules are academically intensive and consist of 45 contact hours.

Assessment & examinations

The exact type of assessment differs from module to module, from combinations of essays and presentations to reflective learning journals and group work. Our popular intensive language modules have their own assessment regulations. The Undergraduate Summer School's board structure upholds the College's commitment to a transparent and fair grading process.

Grades & records of achievement

Students who have met the attendance criteria will receive a record of their achievement. These documents are normally ready in October following your attendance on one or more of our modules, and after the marks have passed through our internal quality assurance procedures. The Undergraduate Summer School publishes its marking criteria, so you know it is a very transparent process. Grading may be in percentage grades or letter grades, both of which can normally be translated into any grading system in the world.

Obtaining credit

The quality of King's Undergraduate Summer School modules is given the highest priority. Although no formal credit is awarded for the programme in 2015, it is hoped that the record of achievement provided on completion of the module will enable universities to consider accrediting your learning on the module towards a degree or other qualification. It is strongly suggested that you speak to your home university as early as possible.

We are more than happy to provide any further information which may be helpful to other universities.

The academic quality of our modules is paramount. To help maintain our leading position and to provide excellent quality to our students, all of our modules must meet strict academic regulations. Each module comprises 45 teaching hours over three weeks.

Module pre-requisites and levels

Undergraduate Summer School modules are set at either level four or level five. Modules offered at level four are typically first year English undergraduate; we are not usually expecting any student to offer particular expertise or to have majored in a particular subject. In England level five is usually set at second year undergraduate so there may be an expectation of the students' knowledge and skills in the particular area of study. Applicants studying on level five modules should self-assess whether they meet the specified expectations. If you have any concerns about this please contact the Summer Programmes office.

King's liberal arts and classics students

Students already studying on the King's BA Liberal Arts and select Classics programmes can now attend a selection of Undergraduate Summer School modules for credit – with credit and marks counting towards their degree programme. Please check your suitability with your Programme Director at King's before applying.

Module books and resources

In most cases we do not require students to prepare for their module in advance and you will not usually be expected to buy module books before you arrive. Module books and texts will usually be available in our library or provided as part of your module.

Applying to the Undergraduate Summer School

Dates for 2015

We are delighted to be able to offer two consecutive Undergraduate Summer School sessions. Each lasts three weeks and you will study one module per session. You can choose to study for one or both sessions, it's up to you. For 2015, the sessions are:

Session One

- Undergraduate Summer School
6 July – 24 July 2015

Session Two

- Undergraduate Summer School
27 July – 14 August 2015

Making an application

Submitting an application to the Undergraduate Summer School means you are applying for a place on the Undergraduate Summer School and not an individual module.

We advise you to apply as early as you can to increase your chances of getting onto the Undergraduate Summer School module(s) of your choice. Places are offered on a first-come, first-served basis.

Admission deadlines

Our admission deadline for modules and accommodation is 31 May.

The admissions portal

You can apply online via the Summer Programmes website under Undergraduate Summer School and then How to Apply:

www.kcl.ac.uk/summer

All applications should be supported by an academic transcript. Applicants whose first language is not English will be required to provide evidence of English language proficiency.

We accept and consider a variety of English language qualifications and other forms of evidence.

Admission process

After you submit your application through the King's admissions portal you will receive acknowledgement of your application, receive notification of the outcome of your application within ten working days, and will be prompted to pay your tuition fees. Please note that there is a separate process for booking your accommodation; this will be conveyed to you once your fees have been paid.

Module allocation

If you are successful with your application we will offer you a place on the Undergraduate Summer School programme and provisionally allocate you a place on your first choice of module. Final confirmation of all modules will be take place after 31 May.

Payment of fees

We require invoices to be paid within 30 days of receipt of invoice or by 31 May, whichever is sooner. Unfortunately we cannot confirm your place on the Undergraduate Summer School until your fees have been paid. Once your fees have been paid your place on the Undergraduate Summer School will be confirmed and further detailed information will be sent out about the programme.

Application fee

All applications are subject to an application fee of £60. This is a one-time, non-refundable fee which covers the administration process for your application. Unfortunately, we are unable to process any application without payment of the application fee.

The fees for 2015 are:

- Session One (1 module)
6 July – 24 July 2015
Programme Fee: £1,500,
Accommodation Fee: £1,155
- Session Two (1 module)
27 July – 14 August 2015
Programme Fee: £1,500
Accommodation Fee: £1,155

• Session One & Two (2 modules)

6 July – 14 August 2015
Programme Fee: £2,500
Accommodation Fee: £2,310

Tuition and accommodation fees

If your application is successful you will be issued with an invoice detailing all relevant fees to be paid. Details of how to pay your fees will be provided with your invoice. As all places are offered to successful applicants on a first-come, first-served basis, early payment of fees is advised. We are unable to confirm your place on the Undergraduate Summer School until your fees have been paid in full. Please note there is a separate process for booking and payment of accommodation fees.

Please note: the accommodation option includes a partial meal plan.

Visa requirements

UK and EU students do not usually need to apply for a visa to study on the Undergraduate Summer School. Students outside the EU may need to apply for a Student Visitor visa. Please note that it is the applicant's responsibility to ensure they travel on the correct visa (if required).

Further advice and information on visa requirements can be obtained from welfare@kcl.ac.uk

Module excursions and travel costs

Some modules may attract supplementary module-specific costs which are not usually included within the tuition fee; these may consist of activities, performances or excursions relevant to your module. The Undergraduate Summer School tries to keep these costs to a minimum, and where possible will advertise additional costs in advance.

Terms and conditions

The King's College London Undergraduate Summer School Terms and Conditions are available on our website. Once a student has submitted an application they are subject to these Terms and Conditions which affect their application, payment terms, cancellations, postponement and non-attendance.

Undergraduate Summer School: Cultural London

From the world-renowned South Bank Centre offering festivals, performances and exhibitions, to the glorious West End theatres and world-class museums, the heart of cultural London is located on the doorstep of King's College London.

Within King's we pride ourselves on our approach to stimulate new thinking, connecting practitioners, policy makers and participants across academia, arts and culture. Our links with industry are fundamental to what we do – locally, nationally and internationally – enabling us to add value to the wider College's teaching, research and learning in these areas.

The King's Undergraduate Summer School aims to follow in this vision, offering a wide range of modules in arts, literature and culture. Key collaborations have included the Museum of London and the V&A. Whether you are passionate about Shakespeare or Jane Austen, or have an interest in theatre, media or literature, the King's Undergraduate Summer School can offer you a range of modules to inspire your study.

Cultural London Session One

Ancient Greek (Intensive)

Session One – Beginners
Session Two – Intermediate

Opening up the fascinating world of Ancient Greek to those who haven't yet had the opportunity, this intensive module is ideal for those keen to find out more about a language and culture that underpins so much in modern life. Offered as two individual sessions or as a combined six week module, this module will guide you from complete beginner to confidently translating straightforward English text into Greek alongside the ability to read basic Greek texts.

Jane Austen's England

Session One

Jane Austen created a complex textual world for her characters to inhabit that continues to capture the imagination of readers across the globe. This module gives you a unique opportunity to examine Austen's heroes and villains and the England in which they lived. You will study the Regency period: the roles of men and women and what they read, saw and experienced, and how Jane Austen responded to it in her novels. You will also explore the modern reader's relationship with Austen's world, how film directors interpret it, and why Austen's creations continue to hold appeal for writers of crime, sci-fi, horror and romance, from P.D. James to Helen Fielding.

Latin (Intensive)

Session One – Beginners
Session Two – Intermediate

One of the most influential languages of all time, this module offers students the opportunity to become confident translating basic English into Latin and reading simple texts in Latin. Students on the Undergraduate Summer School can take this intensive module as a beginner or intermediate learner for one session, or combine the two for an in-depth experience over six weeks.

London & Film

Session One & Two

Offering the perfect introduction to London and to British Cinema, this module will enable you to develop valuable insight into the history and culture of London through film with a focus on three key themes in the representation of London on film: Victorian London, London at War and Swinging London. This module focuses on films which are set and shot within walking distance of King's; you will explore the cultural diversity of urban life, focusing on the cinematic representation of fictional Londoners such as Sherlock Holmes, Dorian Gray and Sweeney Todd.

Media, Gender & Culture

Session One

Taking an innovative and dynamic approach, this module explores ideas like 'how does media organise social and cultural life' and 'what is the sexualisation of culture' and introduces students to critical debates in gender studies, cultural theory and media analysis. Using contemporary media culture as our critical focus, we will examine issues of gender and social change; power and representation; culture and agency; intimacy and mediation; social critique and cultural politics.

Museum of London: curating the city (with the Museum of London)

Session One

Guided by curators and the academic tutor, you will have the rare chance to go behind the scenes at one of Britain's largest and most successful museums, getting the opportunity to view materials not available to the general public. You'll be able to discuss museum objects with the experts who look after them and explore how they might be displayed. You will also consider how to present issues and ideas to diverse audiences, discuss what makes a successful museum display, explore how museums should handle controversial subjects and consider the ethical and financial issues facing the heritage industry today.

Cultural London

Shakespeare in London

Session One

Study Shakespeare in the city which made him successful. We will walk the streets in the footsteps of this legendary playwright, see paintings and buildings he would have observed and, of course, watch his plays performed in the famous Globe theatre, a reconstruction of the playhouse for which Shakespeare wrote. Shakespeare has a huge presence in 21st century London – perhaps even larger than in the 16th century city. The module engages with contemporary manifestations of the playwright and his works, as we seek to understand the near-mythical hold which Shakespeare still has over audiences.

Wonderland – 100 Years of Children’s Literature

Session One

From fairytales, fantasies and fables to adventure stories and nonsense rhymes, this module explores 100 years of children’s literature from the 20th century to the present day. With active discussions and debates about the uses of children’s literature, we will focus on modern and contemporary British prose authors, including J.M. Barrie, Rudyard Kipling, J.R.R. Tolkien, Roald Dahl and J.K. Rowling, while acknowledging influential 18th and 19th century texts and the new genre of fan fiction. The module will develop your knowledge of a variety of interpretative approaches, including psychoanalysis, Marxism, gender theory, narratology and new historicism.

The World of the British Empire

Session One

London was arguably the most important city in the world at the zenith of the British Empire. The city’s position at the centre of the empire’s exchange of commodities, cultures and ideas had an important and lasting effect both upon the empire and city. Through numerous site visits around Greater London, students will explore the legacies of this experience upon the London landscape in a range of ecological, architectural, cultural and economic ways, from explaining the presence of grey squirrels to discussing the possible role of music halls in spreading imperial propaganda.

Cultural London

Session Two

Ancient Greek (Intensive)

Session One – Beginners
Session Two – Intermediate

Opening up the fascinating world of Ancient Greek to those who haven’t yet had the opportunity, this intensive module is ideal for those keen to find out more about a language and culture that underpins so much in modern life. Offered as two individual sessions or as a combined six week module, this module will guide you from complete beginner to confidently translating straightforward English text into Greek alongside the ability to read basic Greek texts.

British Crime Writing

Session Two

Victorian detectives in their consulting rooms; cut-purses lurking in the shadows of Westminster; cynical coppers; charming fraudsters; mob bosses in east-end watering holes – for centuries the popular imagination has peopled London with characters defined by crime. On this module you will delve into a range of crime-writing genres including detective fiction, caper tales, police procedurals, courtroom dramas and true crime. You’ll gain a solid overview of a wide variety of texts and explore key questions posed by critics of crime fiction while investigating the many generic conventions of crime writing and the pleasures and pitfalls of reading it.

History of Medicine

Session Two

This module investigates how concepts of health and disease, and people’s responses to illness, have developed since the Renaissance. Addressing core issues of medicine through the ages, it invites students to reflect on changing images of the body, the emergence of the medical profession and the role of medicine in society.

Latin (Intensive)

Session One – Beginners
Session Two – Intermediate

One of the most influential languages of all time, this module offers students the opportunity to become confident translating basic English into Latin and reading simple texts in Latin. Students on the Undergraduate Summer School can take this intensive module as a beginner or intermediate learner for one session, or combine the two for an in-depth experience over six weeks.

Literature in the City

Session Two

This module will examine the relationship between urban space and narrative representation in two European cities: London and Dublin. It will stage an interrogation of the creation and manipulation of cityscapes through the lens of literature; specifically, the labyrinthine London of Charles Dickens and Virginia Woolf and the mythical Dublin of James Joyce. Students will be encouraged to use a combination of political, social, and literary theory to navigate literal and figurative cityscapes, while a Joyce-centric trip to Dublin, the ideal city for perambulation, will take place during the course of study.

London & Film

Session One & Two

Offering the perfect introduction to London and to British Cinema, this module will enable you to develop valuable insight into the history and culture of London through film with a focus on three key themes in the representation of London on film: Victorian London, London at War and Swinging London. This module focuses on films which are set and shot within walking distance of King’s; you will explore the cultural diversity of urban life, focusing on the cinematic representation of fictional Londoners such as Sherlock Holmes, Dorian Gray and Sweeney Todd.

Theatrical London: contemporary performance in the city

Session Two

You will have the exciting and unique chance to experience and study London’s vibrant theatre scene on this module. You will see the shows, but will also learn about performance through tours of theatrical venues and visits to cultural sites within London. Using a range of texts the module begins with an investigation of London’s theatrical past and how it is presented today in the museum, archive and so-called ‘heritage’ theatre. We will move on to West End performance, examining its historic roots and its current commercial success. Finally, we will consider the socio-political trends in contemporary theatre, including site-specificity and new playwrighting.

The British Monarchy – Royal Politics, Power & Celebrity

Session Two

There have been few more powerful or enduring symbols in modern world history than the British crown. This module asks why the crown – and the kings and queens who wore it – have continued to dazzle Britons and foreigners alike for hundreds of years. The module covers the remarkable lives of sovereigns from James I to the present Queen Elizabeth II. It focuses on the relationship between the crown and the people, and investigates how the monarchy has responded to the challenges of rapidly changing politics, society and culture in Britain and the wider world.

Undergraduate Summer School:
Business London

London is at the hub of the business and finance sectors. With key business organisations and London's Financial District located within the 'Square Mile' of London, King's central location ensures students are right on the edge of the thriving business community.

At King's the Department of Management has been highly ranked for offering 'world leading' research activity, and has a strong reputation for contributing to teaching and practice. Key collaborations with both private and public sector organisations in the UK and abroad ensure excellent links with industry and the media, while our academics are invited to play advisory roles in government and industry.

The King's Undergraduate Summer School offers modules in business, marketing, negotiation, management, leadership and entrepreneurship. The Summer School is an excellent opportunity for both students of business as well as students from other disciplines considering combining a business component with their existing study for when they are looking to establish their future career path.

Business London

Session One

Consumer Behaviour

Session One

This module explores the principle theories of brand choice behaviour drawn from the psychology, sociology and marketing literatures. You will learn why and how perception, attitude and intention measures are developed and administered and the results analysed by marketers as important predictors of sales. We will also explore how past behaviour might be a better predictor of future behaviour by running some simple analysis on large scale behavioural data.

Creative Advertising Planning

Session One

Exploring the concept creation, campaign creation and creative media planning approaches, this module begins with an appreciation of the creative processes for advertising and introduces the role of the planner in advertising. The module explores a variety of research and planning strategies used in advertising agencies and culminates with the creation of effective advertising campaigns across a range of critically selected media. The practical activities are supported with behavioural data on advertising effectiveness from the Ehrenberg Centre's research findings which is contrasted with students' own data patterns from a live survey.

Entrepreneurship

Session One

This module will explore the fundamentals of entrepreneurship and the behaviour and skill sets required to 'think out of the box' to identify and pursue opportunities. We will ascertain entrepreneurial behaviours and skills and define creativity and innovation, as well as asking why they are important. We will also explore idea generation and evaluation techniques and learn how to recognise enterprise opportunities. The module will introduce relevant entrepreneurial management concepts and theories, as well as visiting successful entrepreneurs to help students realise their own potential.

International Business

Session One & Two

Students will have the opportunity to apply theories and concepts to international business negotiations on this module. By following case studies with examples of real business situations, you will learn how companies managed their international business negotiations as well as the consequences of cultural differences in international business deals and conflict resolution. As a result, you'll gain new skills in analysing issues in cross-cultural communications, understand the demands of handling international business negotiations, and be able to confidently identify and critically evaluate ethical issues surrounding business negotiations in a managerial environment.

Strategic Management

Session One & Two

This module provides an introduction to the field of Strategic Management, exploring key ideas and theories in the field and how they can be useful for the direction and scope of an organisation. You will have the opportunity to apply theories and concepts to case studies with examples of real business situations and learn how companies successfully or unsuccessfully manage their marketing functions. We will examine the key challenges global companies face and help you develop an excellent understanding of the major approaches companies employ as they seek to dominate complex environments.

Business London

Session Two

Art of Leadership

Session Two

Designed to familiarise you with the main concepts and theories of leadership, this module will give you the chance to apply them critically to 'real world' situations such as team or public leadership. We will closely examine various approaches within leadership studies, clarifying what leadership is – and what it is not. We will cover a broad range of topics such as the distinction between transformational and transactional leadership, leadership ethics, non-profit leadership and female leadership. You will gain an understanding of the major concepts and approaches to leadership, the role of followers for the leadership process and the role of contingency.

International Business

Session One & Two

Students will have the opportunity to apply theories and concepts to international business negotiations on this module. By following case studies with examples of real business situations, you will learn how companies managed their international business negotiations as well as the consequences of cultural differences in international business deals and conflict resolution. As a result, you'll gain new skills in analysing issues in cross-cultural communications, understand the demands of handling international business negotiations, and be able to confidently identify and critically evaluate ethical issues surrounding business negotiations in a managerial environment.

International Marketing

Session Two

Providing an important insight into international marketing concepts, issues, motivations and strategy, you will explore the economic, political, legal and environmental influences on international marketing and their effect on the marketing strategy, the processes and challenges in entering new markets, and the effects of internationalisation on the marketing strategy. We will consider the importance of global information systems and market research, segmentation, targeting, and positioning, importing, exporting, and sourcing, as well as global market entry strategies.

Negotiation: strategy & skills

Session Two

Drawing upon three decades of interdisciplinary research in negotiation perspectives of economics, behavioural decision science and social, cognitive-behavioural and psychodynamic psychology, this module explores the most influential negotiation models as well as relevant topics in modern social and cognitive-behavioural psychology. The module aims to address the requirements of modern professional life where important aspects of work often entail negotiation in complex interpersonal settings involving multiple parties and multiple issues, and where deal-making, consensus building and problem-solving frequently take the central stage.

Strategic Management

Session One & Two

This module provides an introduction to the field of Strategic Management, exploring key ideas and theories in the field and how they can be useful for the direction and scope of an organisation. You will have the opportunity to apply theories and concepts to case studies with examples of real business situations and learn how companies successfully or unsuccessfully manage their marketing functions. We will examine the key challenges global companies face and help you develop an excellent understanding of the major approaches companies employ as they seek to dominate complex environments.

Undergraduate Summer School:
Health London

Health and healthcare play an enormous part in ensuring the well-being of our communities on a social and economic scale; continued research into further understanding health and disease globally is paramount.

King's is recognised as a world leading research-led university in health-related activities, one that brings people together both working and studying in the university. Our Health centres and departments are interdisciplinary and collaborative, and our internationally-recognised expertise and contributions to policy development are utilised by a multitude of organisations.

The King's Undergraduate Summer School works with these departments to offer high quality, industry-specific modules to undergraduate students looking to pursue a career in health. Students can choose to look at health from a social, historical or physiological perspective as the Summer School offers an array of fascinating topics to engage students interested in this area of study.

Health London Session One

Forensic Science

Session One

This module may show you that forensic science is not quite as it is portrayed in television programmes but will give you an insight into techniques that are used to great effect in real forensic science. It is delivered by the King's Forensic Science unit by academics with an international reputation in the field and researchers at the cutting edge of advances in the subject. It will provide you with an overview of the forensic science field and of the major techniques employed in forensic laboratories all over the world, enabling you to develop specific skills associated with forensic analysis.

Global Health & Social Justice

Session One

Global health, focusing on health and the social, economic, political and cultural forces in the world that shape it, has never been so important. Drawing crucial perspectives from the natural and social sciences and the humanities, it considers issues ranging from migration, conflict, human rights, trade and access to medicines. You will explore the history of aid, examine current trends and think critically about the latest global health developments. As a student on this module you will join others from a range of backgrounds and disciplines to increase your understanding of the global health challenges that affect us all.

Human Anatomy & Physiology

Session One

This module will provide you with an understanding of basic human anatomy and physiology. The systems within the body that will be covered during the module are the skeletal, muscular, respiratory, cardiovascular, endocrine, nervous and urinary systems. Through the use of computer-assisted learning students will have the opportunity to use virtual 3D representations taken from the Visible Human data set.

Psychology & Profiling of Terrorism

Session One

This module will discuss in detail the history and practice of the method of criminal profiling with a focus on the unique aspect of this method in relation to terrorism. You will analyse the psychology and specific profiles of different terrorist groups, individuals and leaders to facilitate the possibility of predicting their behaviour and future conduct. With so much to explore and develop in the relatively new methods of profiling and the psychology of terrorism, this is a fascinating chance to get into the minds and operations of extreme individuals and groups.

Public Health

Session One

Introducing students to public health, this module examines an exciting and growing field which is underpinned by a diverse group of disciplines reflecting both the arts and sciences, employing a range of strategies to promote and protect health and well-being. We will look at the evolution of public health specifically in the UK, but also consider how our changing global landscape means that boundaries between populations are increasingly less well demarcated. We will also explore the key concepts of epidemiology and the broader determinants of health.

Technology – Applied Physics

Session One

Our natural curiosity asks us how the universe works; physics has enabled these questions to be answered. This module will show students how physics can explain many processes and phenomena in real life. It is designed to provide students with a clear presentation of the basic concepts and principles of aerodynamics, semiconductors and medical imaging techniques, and also to strengthen an understanding of these concepts through undertaking experiments. We will examine the theoretical considerations underpinning the topics covered in the module with a focus on the basic strategies and thought processes involved in problem solving.

Health London

Session Two

Healthcare & Technology

Session Two

In this module students will acquire basic understanding and knowledge of a selection of key topics in Healthcare Technology including the basics of medical imaging, medical simulation and medical robotics. The module also aims to give students practical experience of each of the mentioned topics and an awareness of the historical developments in Healthcare Technology over the last 100 years. This module is aimed at students from a range of backgrounds including those studying medicine, biomedical sciences, biomedical engineering, dentistry, natural sciences, nursing and other subjects allied to healthcare.

History of Medicine

Session Two

This module investigates how concepts of health and disease, and people's responses to illness, have developed since the Renaissance. Addressing core issues of medicine through the ages, it invites students to reflect on changing images of the body, the emergence of the medical profession and its relationship with patients, and the role of medicine in society – from issues of public health in Europe and the colonies, to medicine and war. An intense introduction to the history of medicine, this module offers knowledge of key themes in medical history, helping you make connections between medicine and its wider social relations.

LEGAL LONDON

Undergraduate Summer School: Legal London

With the Royal Courts of Justice, Inns of Court, the Old Bailey and a wealth of law firms centrally located in London, King's College London is closely situated to 'Legal London'.

As one of the oldest law schools in England, the King's Dickson Poon School of Law is globally recognised as one of the best law schools in the world. (Guardian University Guide 2015: Law). It has one of this country's most distinguished research and teaching reputations and offers students invaluable interaction with the wider legal community and opportunities to establish links with peers and a wider professional network.

The King's Undergraduate Summer School works alongside the School to ensure we are offering high quality, relevant law modules to our students. With law modules available on the European Union, English Legal System, Human Rights, Criminology, Finance Regulation, Refugee Law (in conjunction with UNHCR), and International Commercial Law, students have a realm of engaging modules to choose from.

Legal London

Session One

English Legal System

Session One

Taught at the very centre of legal London, this module offers the chance to discover the reasons why the common-law system has had such an impact across the world. By examining primary and secondary sources we will look at the English legal system, exploring the basics of British law, and using historical context and its surroundings to discover the rich history of the system.

Forensic Science

Session One

This module may show you that forensic science is not quite as it is portrayed in television programmes but will give you an insight into techniques that are used to great effect in real forensic science. It is delivered by the King's Forensic Science unit by academics with an international reputation in the field and researchers at the cutting edge of advances in the subject. It will provide you with an overview of the forensic science field and of the major techniques employed in forensic laboratories all over the world, enabling you to develop specific skills associated with forensic analysis.

International Commercial Law

Session One & Two

Offering a crucial insight into the underlying structure and recent developments of international commercial law, this module is modelled on two key questions: what is the applicable law that governs trans-border commerce, and how can the conduct of private corporations be harmonised, with disputes arising in this global environment settled effectively? Students on this module will gain an invaluable understanding of the concepts underlying the evolution of international commerce as well as a practical encounter with the profession of an international lawyer.

International Human Rights Law

Session One

Human rights laws have played an enormously influential role in protecting the activities of both individuals and groups against infringement by the state, but this protection has been challenged, becoming subject to controversial limitations in recent times. This module will give you a firm foundation for future study and research. You will gain valuable insight into the most topical and controversial aspects of human rights law within the broader historical and theoretical contexts, become familiar with the main instruments of international human rights law, and learn how to conduct basic legal research in the human rights field.

Legal London

Session Two

Criminology & Criminal Justice

Session Two

An introduction to one of the most relevant and controversial topics in modern society – crime and its control – this module adopts a criminological and socio-legal approach to give students the opportunity to reflect on current issues on criminality, criminal and deviant behaviour, social control, policing and punishment. We will analyse the criminal justice system through studies of surveillance, policing and sentencing and engage in the advanced study of key national and international law and policy developments relating to areas such as policing and crime prevention, youth justice, and corporate crime.

European Union Law

Session Two

This module will give you a comprehensive overview of European Union Law, its impact on policy fields and the role of the European Court of Justice in providing the law with necessary judicial review. We will debate the issues and future viability of EU Law, consider non-discrimination and equality and discuss the dichotomy between citizenship and working rights and the work of the EU Court, as well as exploring the Union's decision-making process and monetary union.

Forced Migration(s) and Refugee Law (with United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR))

Session Two

This module is being offered by King's College London in collaboration with the UK Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR). It will provide students with a general introduction to forced migration and the legal, political and social dynamics that surround it. Along with getting UNHCR's perspective on shaping, making and evaluating international refugee law, students will also develop an appreciation of the reasons behind and means of forced migration.

International Commercial Law

Session One & Two

Offering a crucial insight into the underlying structure and recent developments of international commercial law, this module is modelled on two key questions: what is the applicable law that governs trans-border commerce, and how can the conduct of private corporations be harmonised, with disputes arising in this global environment settled effectively? Students on this module will gain an invaluable understanding of the concepts underlying the evolution of international commerce as well as a practical encounter with the profession of an international lawyer.

International Regulation of Finance

Session Two

With an aim to provide students with a comprehensive and insightful programme on regulation of finance at the international and European dimensions, this module will equip students with an advanced knowledge of the theoretical underpinnings of international financial regulation. You will gain an understanding of the institutional framework of financial regulation, the main substantial issues of financial regulation and the main aspects of law and regulation concerning the structure, operation and function of financial markets and financial institutions. The module will cover the main themes in financial regulation such as theories of finance, securities regulation and banking regulation.

Undergraduate Summer School:
Governance London

London's influence on the political landscape of both the UK and abroad is immense.

Recognised political sites like the Houses of Parliament and 10 Downing Street are key landmarks in the city, while London's history of defence can be discovered by visiting many important sites including the Imperial War Museum, Tower of London and HMS Belfast. King's has various departments that focus on this area of study; along with our Global Institutes we offer programmes in Defence, War Studies, Political Economy and many more.

The King's Undergraduate Summer School offers modules in governance that look to bridge the gap between academic theory and logic of real-world politics, and encourages fresh perspectives on political ideas, institutions, processes and challenges. We offer modules in Defence Policy and Military Strategy (with the Royal United Services Institute), Espionage and Intelligence, International Relations, World Politics, and Diplomacy, all with the aim of equipping our students with knowledge of the world around them.

Governance London

Session One

Change & Continuity: world politics since 1945

Session One

The last sixty years has been one of the most dynamic periods in world politics – one in which we continue to exist. You will gain an intellectual understanding of the period's main features, including: the invention and use of atomic weapons and their impact on military strategy; the origins, nature and end of the cold war; the impact of 9/11 on world politics; the emergence of 'new' security threats: trans-national terrorism; international crime; enforced migration; climate change, and the nature of crisis management before and after 9/11.

Global Energy Politics

Session One

Energy poses many of the defining political, economic and environmental questions of our age. On this module, you will become familiar with the fundamentals of international politics and in particular, international energy politics. You will consider issues such as energy security, the geopolitics of energy, war for natural resources, the political economy of energy, the curse of natural resources in resource rich developing countries and the politics of climate change. Studying real world cases and gaining face-to-face insight from leading experts, you will gain a clear conceptual framework to support your understanding of the energy challenges of the future.

International Relations

Session One

During this module you will closely examine the various approaches within international relations, its theories and the specific aspects of the international they seek to understand. The module will cover a broad range of approaches such as realist, liberal-institutionalist and constructivist thinking, and also take a close look at global governance and international political economy approaches. Equipped with a basic understanding of these different perspectives, you will then be challenged to apply them to major real world issues.

Psychology & Profiling of Terrorism

Session One

This module will discuss in detail the history and practice of the method of criminal profiling with a focus on the unique aspect of this method in relation to terrorism. You will analyse the psychology and specific profiles of different terrorist groups, individuals and leaders to facilitate the possibility of predicting their behaviour and future conduct. With so much to explore and develop in the relatively new methods of profiling and the psychology of terrorism, this is a fascinating chance to get into the minds and operations of extreme individuals and groups.

Governance London

Session Two

International Political Economy

Session Two

Exploring the relationship between power and wealth, this module will focus on the main theoretical approaches, concepts and substantive issues that influence the interplay between economics and politics across regional and global arenas. It will examine the conditions that drive the development of cooperative international economic behaviour among sovereign states as well as bargaining between rich and poor countries under the present conditions of economic interdependence, international division of labour, international trade, multinational corporations, and a proliferation of preferential trade and investment agreements.

Making Defence Policy & National Military Strategy (with the Royal United Services Institute (RUSI))

Session Two

Founded in 1831 by the Duke of Wellington, the Royal United Services Institute (RUSI) is an independent think tank engaged in cutting edge defence and security research. This module offers the chance to gain in-depth understanding of defence and the purposes of armed forces, using the United Kingdom as a key illustration of a major expeditionary military power. We will consider nations' models and compare the strengths and weaknesses of their processes, policies and strategies to give you a critical understanding of the principles of policy development, strategic theory, and the way those principles have developed.

Secrets and Spies: modern espionage & intelligence

Session Two

Getting 'behind the scenes' of major historic and contemporary events, we will study intelligence in democracies and dictatorships, the impact of technology, the relationship between spies, politicians and the media, and debate what is right or wrong in the spying game. We will examine the public understanding of spying, how the media reflects reality and the spy agencies of some of the major intelligence powers; the USA, Britain and Russia. We will examine key recent events like the 9/11 attacks, and will also investigate how spy agencies conspired to overthrow governments in the 20th century.

War & Diplomacy

Session Two

Students on this module will examine the role and impact of war and diplomacy on the changing structure and process of international relations. It will enable students to enhance their knowledge and understanding of how each of these seminal features of global politics have interacted with each other for good or ill in the theory and practice of crisis management. Students will evaluate the concept of diplomacy and its role in maintaining and improving the quality of life while also examining war as an institution and its impact on the balance of power.

Pre-University Summer School

King's Pre-University Summer School is a unique and social experience.

Central location

The classroom and campus-based activities are complemented by academic excursions and a full and varied social programme which takes advantage of King's enviable central London location.

Interact and innovate

There is a strong interactive component to each module where you will have the opportunity to work with and discuss innovative ideas.

Voice of the Student

I felt a need to enrich my summer vacation and the programme absolutely exceeded my expectations... attending classes, making friends internationally, but most importantly, I enjoyed studying in the heart of a world-class city.

Pre-University Summer School

26 July – 8 August 2015

The King's College London Pre-University Summer School is a unique academic and social experience based in the very heart of London. It aims to provide an insight into life at one of the world's top 20 universities (QS World University Rankings 2014/15) with a mixture of academic lectures and study sessions, university preparation and careers guidance. The classroom and campus-based activities are complemented by academic excursions and a full and varied social programme which takes advantage of King's enviable central London location. The Pre-University Summer School is designed as a fully residential programme. We feel this fully immersive experience provides students with a chance to grow and develop both in and outside the classroom.

Who is it for?

The Pre-University Summer School is open to independent high-achieving students who are enrolled in their final two years at high school so are usually between the ages of 16 and 18. It is an intensive social and academic two week programme in one of the busiest and most diverse cities in the world and therefore independence, maturity and motivation are essential qualities for all applicants.

Why should I attend the Pre-University Summer School?

Academic classes

From business, law and health to politics and history, you will be exposed to informative lectures and seminars on your chosen topic of study. There is a strong interactive component to each module where you will have the opportunity to work with and discuss innovative ideas with both your tutor and your classmates. All modules include assessment, with certificates being awarded on successful completion of your module.

Social programme

The programme fee includes a number of exciting excursions and activities to take advantage of King's College London's central location. The historic city of London is a cultural and entertainment capital and in previous years students have enjoyed a trip to a West End theatre, unique walking tours, a live cabaret and circus evening and a boat party on the Thames. The social programme also includes a weekend spent outside of London, giving students the chance to experience another part of the country and to further build relationships with their peers.

Accommodation and meals

Accommodation is guaranteed for all Pre-University students and situated very close to campus. All meals are provided, with some evening meals on offer at local London restaurants.

Staffing, care and support

Throughout their time on the programme, students will be fully supported by a team of trained and experienced Pre-University Summer School staff. The Student Ambassadors will live with the students in the accommodation and accompany them throughout their time to help them make the most of their Pre-University experience.

Disclaimer

This prospectus was printed in January 2015. It contains information on the Summer Programmes that King's College London intends to run for students who are planning to attend in the summer of 2015. The College has tried to give students an early opportunity to begin their research on universities and programmes. To do this however the information in this prospectus had to be collected and prepared several months before the start of the various Summer Programmes in July 2015. This means that some of it may become outdated or that details will have changed before the start of the Summer Programmes. Modules are subject to College approval. The College has made every effort to ensure that the information provided is both helpful to prospective candidates and accurate at the time of this publication. Some circumstances (such as staff changes or resource limitations over which the College has no control, or the level of demand for a particular module) may result in the College having to withdraw or change aspects of the programme detailed in this prospectus. This could include, but not necessarily be limited to, module content, staffing, the location where the module is taught, and the facilities provided to deliver the module.

Prospective candidates should note that, in the event of such circumstances occurring, the College cannot accept liability for any claims for costs or damages made by a student resulting from any change to, or withdrawal of, a module that he/she had intended to study. For this reason it is particularly important that you check the website for updates (www.kcl.ac.uk/summer) or contact the College using the contact details contained within this document.
